real-time mesh simplification using the gpu - gpu towards applications that are well-suited for these streaming architectures. by contrast, mesh simplification has traditionally been viewed as a non-interactive process not readily amenable to gpu acceleration. we demonstrate how it becomes practical for real-time use through our method, and that the use of the gpu real-time parallel hashing on the gpu - online submission id: 0202 real-time parallel hashing on the gpu category: figure 1: our hash tables are built and queried every frame for two animated point clouds (pictured in the center), allowing interactive boolean operations between the two surfaces. blue parts of one model represent voxels inside the other model, while green parts mark protecting real-time gpu kernels on integrated cpu-gpu soc ... - the gpusync framework that uses real-time locking protocols to deterministically handle gpu access requests [10]. here, at any given time, one gpu kernel is allowed to utilize the gpu to eliminate the unpredictability caused by co-scheduled gpu kernels. in [11], instead of using a real-time locking protocol timegraph: gpu scheduling for real-time multi-tasking ... - in real-time multi-tasking environments. gpu resource management is usually supported at the operating-system level, while gpu program code itself including gpu commands is generated through libraries, compilers, and runtime frameworks. particularly, it is a device driver that transfers gpu commands from the cpu to the gpu, regardless of whether ... real-time mesh simplification using the gpu - gpu towards applications that are well-suited for these streaming architectures. by contrast, mesh simplification has traditionally been viewed as a non-interactive process not readily amenable to gpu acceleration. we demonstrate how it becomes practical for real-time use through our method, and that the use of the gpu real-time chroma keying on the gpu - boris fx - full advantage of the parallel nature of gpu hardware. the method optimizes gpu throughput by performing image-processing tasks in parallel and minimizing texture lookup and global memory access. keywords: chroma key, image processing, gpu computing, real-time video processing. 1 introduction a common visual effect in video broadcast and post- gpusync: a framework for real-time gpu management - gpusync: a framework for real-time gpu management glenn a. elliot, bryan c. ward, and james h. anderson department of computer science, university of north carolina at chapel hill abstract this paper describes gpusync, which is a framework for managing graphics processing units (gpus) in multi-gpu multicore real-time systems. gpusync was ... gpu computing for real-time optical measurement techniques - gpu computing for real-time optical measurement techniques suren chilingaryan, sven bundschuh, chris eberl, andreas kopmann karlsruhe institute of technology digital image correlation and tracking the accurate measurement of displacement and strains during deformation of advanced materials and devices continues to be a primary challenge to real-world constraints of gpus in real-time systems - for a real-time system, are only supported to a limited de-gree. 4 summary of research the constraints imposed by current gpu technology do not make it impossible to integrate gpus into real-time systems. in our research, we have found ways to implement real-time gpu resource arbitration, effectively re- the potential for real-time computational fluid dynamics ... - the potential for real-time computational fluid dynamics via gpu acceleration alistair revell the university of manchester • gpu accelerated cfd • defining realtime simulation and its potential • the numbers: a recent example and current status overview real-time gpu surface curvature estimation - only resides on the gpu, cpu algorithms limit performance. i introduce a gpu algorithm for estimating curvature in real-time on arbitrary triangular meshes residing in gpu memory. i test my algorithm in a line drawing system with a vertex-skinned animation system and a gpu-based isosurface extraction system. beyond real-time video surveillance analytics with gpus - use of the gpu enables faster than real time processing with the standard rgb model and the more computationally intensive advanced color la*b* model off-the -shelf hw platform: cpu - intel core i7-3770 (4 cores) gpu - nvidia gtx690 (3092 cores) better than real-time intuvison, inc. proprietary real-time stochastic rasterization on conventional gpu ... - visibility evaluation. it demonstrates—for the first time, with a full stochastic technique—real-time performance on conventional gpu architectures for complex scenes at 1920 1080 hd resolution. the algorithm operates on dynamic triangle meshes for which per-vertex velocity or corresponding vertices from the previous frame are available.
